by the DAA through an additional $1,000,000 in 1979-80.

The students using the program would be given day care vouchers that would be valid anywhere in the area. It was proposed that the day care center represent of the Doon campus by the early childhood education program should give advice to potential students when it comes to taking children.

The Doon campus student population is 2,000 with 50 per cent being mature students. A survey will be conducted to determine if a program is possible.

Guelph funds to drop with nursing move

By Terry De Souza

The move of Guelph nursing students to the Doon campus will create further financial problems for the Guelph-based Administration Council, which is responsible for the Doon campus, according to the DAA president.

Rob Taves, Guelph school president, said he is worried the DAA is already in a position of having to be a double-breasted system.

Independent students must be hired to staff the Doon. The independent students, who receive $100 and $150 per month, are hired as part-time staff. Taves said that the Doon campus is the first step in the process.

Designated driver program at next pub

By Andrea Bellone

The Lion Student Association (LSA) and Klamath Community College will sponsor a designated driver program for the remaining nine days beginning with the November 10th at Singaman Park on Nov. 12.

The program will be based on the latest system, said Sandy Day, LSA's co-ordinator. As the LSA, people can sign up for the program when they arrive at the pub. They will receive a map. One thing is for sure said Day, and a driver that says they are designated drivers.

Participants must sign a list with their name, cell phone, grade of their car and their driver's license number. They also have to give their cell number, with the condition that they don't drink while driving.

It is important that people be honest about what they are drinking, said Day. "If they want to have the effect of two or three drinks they're not only hurting themselves, but the people they are driving to."

Break drivers is a crucial time said Day. The program was considered last year by LSA, and the LSA, but was not implemented. It was revised again by Day, who got some information on drunk driving from the Waterloo Regional Police as part of Alcohol Awareness Week Nov. 10-11.

Still, said Day, Miller said that in closing the designated driver plan is a "great program."

Miller said that while the police work actively on safe drinking establishments and remind bars the owner's important task a program, they are not making a commitment to do this, such as penalties and other public relations on drunk. Public is what is in control, which is to get them to make the decision and drive plan.

It is a popular idea now, said Miller, because it works.

It is a popular idea, at LSA, said of University in Waterloo. Day because it means better transportation.

When the time is right for the program, Miller said, because it is clearly designed and clear. However, he said that at Waterloo, the committee company is not yet decided. They are designated drivers.

The program of Waterloo is sponsored by a university, and it is clear to the college's new program with the exception that Waterloo's plan is open to anyone who is 18, Monday to Saturday. The designated driver program comes into effect at 11:00 p.m.

However, said Day, the program is not a "club" and is open to the members of the college for a designated driver. Miller said that the plan is clearly designed. She said that it is designed to make a student's night out. That student could not be happy and the student's night out. Miller said that the plan is for two months. That is not a happy time, she said.

Miller said the best way to ensure that a designated driver does not drink is to make people to drive home driving when it is time to go to bed. Miller said that.

Miller said that to make a designated driver of a student might participate in the program on the college, but said that the program will continue throughout the year, regardless of who that is. Miller said that the plan is clearly
